Writers of the Revolution

from Speech in the Virginia Convention
by Patrick Henry

Meet the Author

Known as “the Orator of Liberty,”
Patrick Henry made a name for himself with his speeches supporting American democracy. He was one of the earliest opponents of British rule in the American colonies. In 1765, after the British Parliament passed a tax bill called the Stamp Act, Henry was among the members of the Virginia legislature that challenged the legality of a British tax on the colonies. But he went farther than his colleagues by making a threat against the king. In his argument, so the story goes, he used a loaded analogy: “Caesar had his Brutus, Charles the First his Cromwell, and George III . . .”—at this point, shouts of “Treason!” erupted in the hall, but Henry continued—“may profit by their example.” He ended his speech with the defiant words, “If this be treason, make the most of it.” Henry did indeed make the most of his “treason,” becoming a tireless and influential leader both before and after the Revolution.

Profitable Law Career  Henry was born in Virginia to a prosperous landowner. His father, who had attended the University of Aberdeen in Scotland, gave him a classical education at home. His mother, Sarah Winston Syme, was from a wealthy family. Henry went out on his own at age 15. Although smart and industrious, he couldn’t find success as a storekeeper or later as a tobacco planter. After marrying and starting a family, he decided to teach himself law, and in 1760, at the age of 24, he was admitted to the bar. Henry’s eloquence, quick wit, and rhetorical gifts served him well, and his law practice grew increasingly profitable.

Popular Virginia Politician  Henry is best known for his fervent “Speech in the Virginia Convention,” which narrowly convinced the assembled leadership to prepare for war with Britain. In addition, he organized a Virginia militia that became part of the new Continental Army after independence was declared. He helped write the new state constitution and the Virginia Declaration of Rights, which was a major influence on the Bill of Rights added to the U.S. Constitution. He also served several terms as governor of Virginia and as a state legislator. Although President Washington offered him positions as secretary of state and Supreme Court justice, Henry declined and always remained suspicious of the federal government. In 1799, after being elected again to the state legislature, he died at his 700-acre plantation, Red Hill, before he could take office.

TEXT ANALYSIS: RHETORICAL DEVICES

Rhetorical devices are structures within language that appeal to readers or listeners and communicate ideas.

- A rhetorical question is a question to which no answer is expected. (But when shall we be stronger?)
- Antithesis expresses contrasting ideas in parallel grammatical structures. (Give me liberty, or give me death!)
- Repetition is the recurrence of words, phrases, or lines. (Let it come! I repeat it, sir, let it come!).
- Parallelism is a kind of repetition in which words or phrases in the same grammatical form connect ideas. (Is life so dear, or peace so sweet...)
- Biblical allusions are references to events, figures, or phrases from the Bible. In this selection, they have the rhetorical appeal of shared beliefs.

As you read Henry’s speech, be on the lookout for rhetorical devices and how they might have affected his audience.

READING SKILL: READING A PERSUASIVE SPEECH

In this famous speech, Patrick Henry speaks to members of the Virginia convention, but clearly he is aware of a wider audience—even of future generations reading his words. As you read the speech, think about Henry’s audience and how he uses language to appeal to his audience. What tone or attitude do you detect in his language, and how does his choice of words reveal his purpose as a speaker?

Mr. President:1 No man thinks more highly than I do of the patriotism, as well as abilities, of the very worthy gentlemen who have just addressed the House. But different men often see the same subject in different lights; and, therefore, I hope that it will not be thought disrespectful to those gentlemen, if, entertaining as I do opinions of a character very opposite to theirs, I shall speak forth my sentiments freely and without reserve. This is no time for ceremony. The question before the House is one of awful moment2 to this country. For my own part I consider it as nothing less than a question of freedom or slavery; and in proportion to the magnitude of the subject ought to be the freedom of the debate. It is only in this way that we can hope to arrive at truth, and fulfill the great responsibility which we hold to God and our country. Should I keep back my opinions at such a

2. of awful moment: of very grave importance.

time, through fear of giving offense, I should consider myself as guilty of treason towards my country, and of an act of disloyalty towards the majesty of heaven, which I revere above all earthly kings.

Mr. President, it is natural to man to indulge in the illusions of hope. We are apt to shut our eyes against a painful truth, and listen to the song of that siren, till she transforms us into beasts. Is this the part of wise men, engaged in a great and arduous struggle for liberty? Are we disposed to be of the number of those who, having eyes, see not, and having ears, hear not, the things which so nearly concern their temporal salvation? For my part, whatever anguish of spirit it may cost, I am willing to know the whole truth—to know the worst and to provide for it.

I have but one lamp by which my feet are guided; and that is the lamp of experience. I know of no way of judging of the future but by the past. And judging by the past, I wish to know what there has been in the conduct of the British ministry for the last ten years, to justify those hopes with which gentlemen have been pleased to solace themselves and the House? Is it that insidious smile with which our petition has been lately received? Trust it not, sir; it will prove a snare to your feet. Suffer not yourselves to be betrayed with a kiss.

Ask yourselves how this gracious reception of our petition comports with these warlike preparations which cover our waters and darken our land. Are fleets and armies necessary to a work of love and reconciliation? Have we shown ourselves so unwilling to be reconciled that force must be called in to win back our love? Let us not deceive ourselves, sir. These are the implements of war and subjugation—the last arguments to which kings resort. I ask gentlemen, sir, what means this martial array, if its purpose be not to force us to submission? Can gentlemen assign any other possible motives for it? Has Great Britain any enemy, in this quarter of the world, to call for all this accumulation of navies and armies? No, sir, she has none. They are meant for us; they can be meant for no other. They are sent over to bind and rivet upon us those chains which the British ministry have been so long forging.

And what have we to oppose to them? Shall we try argument? Sir, we have been trying that for the last ten years. Have we anything new to offer on the subject?
Nothing. We have held the subject up in every light of which it is capable; but it has been all in vain. Shall we resort to entreaty and humble supplication? What terms shall we find which have not been already exhausted? Let us not, I beseech you, sir, deceive ourselves longer.

3. the illusions of hope . . . into beasts: In the Odyssey of Homer, the goddess Circe lures men to her island and then magically transforms them into pigs. Henry suggests that the “illusions of hope” may transform people in a similar way.

4. having eyes . . . hear not: an allusion to Ezekiel 12:2 in the Bible, which speaks of “who have eyes to see, but see not, who have ears to hear, but hear not.”

5. betrayed with a kiss: an allusion to Luke 22:47–48 in the Bible, wherein Judas betrayed Jesus to the Roman soldiers by kissing him and thus identifying him.

6. comports: agrees or goes along with.

7. subjugation: control by conquering.
Sir, we have done everything that could be done to avert the storm which is now coming on. We have petitioned; we have remonstrated⁸; we have supplicated; we have prostrated ourselves before the throne, and have implored its interposition⁹ to arrest the tyrannical hands of the ministry and Parliament. Our petitions have been slighted; our remonstrances have produced additional violence and insult; our supplications have been disregarded; and we have been spurned, with contempt, from the foot of the throne. In vain, after these things, may we indulge the fond hope of peace and reconciliation. There is no longer any room for hope.

⁸. remonstrated: to object; to protest strongly.
⁹. we have prostrated . . . interposition: We have thrown ourselves at the feet of the king and have begged for intervention.
If we wish to be free—if we mean to preserve inviolate those inestimable privileges for which we have been so long contending—if we mean not basely to abandon the noble struggle in which we have been so long engaged, and which we have pledged ourselves never to abandon until the glorious object of our contest shall be obtained, we must fight! I repeat it, sir, we must fight! An appeal to arms and to the God of Hosts is all that is left us!

They tell us, sir, that we are weak—unable to cope with so formidable an adversary. But when shall we be stronger? Will it be the next week, or the next year? Will it be when we are totally disarmed, and when a British guard shall be stationed in every house? Shall we gather strength by irresolution and inaction? Shall we acquire the means of effectual resistance, by lying supinely on our backs, and hugging the delusive phantom of hope, until our enemies shall have bound us hand and foot?

Sir, we are not weak, if we make a proper use of those means which the God of nature hath placed in our power. Three millions of people, armed in the holy cause of liberty, and in such a country as that which we possess, are invincible by any force which our enemy can send against us. Besides, sir, we shall not fight our battles alone. There is a just God who presides over the destinies of nations, and who will raise up friends to fight our battles for us. The battle, sir, is not to the strong alone; it is to the vigilant, the active, the brave. Besides, sir, we have no election. If we were base enough to desire it, it is now too late to retire from the contest. There is no retreat but in submission and slavery! Their clanking may be heard on the plains of Boston! The war is inevitable—and let it come! I repeat it, sir, let it come!

It is in vain, sir, to extenuate the matter. Gentlemen may cry, “Peace! peace!”—but there is no peace. The war is actually begun! The next gale that sweeps from the north will bring to our ears the clash of resounding arms! Our brethren are already in the field! Why stand we here idle? What is it that gentlemen wish? What would they have? Is life so dear, or peace so sweet, as to be purchased at the price of chains and slavery? Forbid it, Almighty God! I know not what course others may take; but as for me, give me liberty, or give me death!

inviolet (in-vi-ol-it) adj. not violated; intact supinely (soo-pun-lé) adv. in a manner with the face upward invincible (in-vin-sal-bel) adj. unbeatable vigilant (vi-jal-ant) adj. alert; watchful

RHETORICAL DEVICES
Why do you think Henry repeats the word sir so often in this paragraph? Explain the likely effect of this repetition as well as that of the phrase “let it come!”

extenuate (ek-stun-at) vt. to lessen the seriousness of, especially by providing partial excuses

PERSUASIVE SPEECH
Reread lines 80–86. Notice how the pace or momentum of the speech accelerates as Henry draws to a close. How does the change in pace affect the speaker’s tone? What purpose do you detect in the pace and tone of Henry’s closing lines? Cite evidence from the speech to support your answer.

10. battle . . . strong alone: an allusion to Ecclesiastes 9:11 in the Bible, “the race is not to the swift, nor the battle to the strong.”
11. election: choice.
12. the next gale . . . north: Some colonists in Massachusetts had already shown open resistance to the British and were on the brink of war.
Comprehension

1. Recall  What does Patrick Henry urge the colonists to do?

2. Paraphrase  Reread lines 22–28. What methods had the colonists already used to express their complaints against the British?

3. Clarify  How did the British respond to those complaints?

Text Analysis

4. Analyze a Persuasive Speech  How do beliefs shared by speaker and audience advance Henry’s purpose and affect his tone in this speech? Support your answer with evidence from the speech.

5. Interpret Allusions  Review the following allusions to the Bible that Henry uses in his speech. Explain the rhetorical appeal of each allusion.

   - lines 18–19
   - lines 74–75

6. Evaluate Appeals  How does Henry convince his audience that the decisive moment to fight is at hand? In a chart, summarize his reasons. Then, beside each, note whether he appeals mainly to logic or emotion. Which reasons are strongest? Explain.

7. Make Judgments About Rhetorical Devices  Review the rhetorical devices discussed on page 229. Which devices occur most frequently in Henry’s speech? Do you think that rhetorical devices are an effective way to communicate, or do you find them manipulative? Cite examples from the text to support your answer.

Text Criticism

8. Different Perspectives  Imagine that the following people heard Henry’s speech from the visitor’s gallery. How might each have reacted, and why?

   - the wife of one of the delegates
   - a farmer whose parents live in England
   - a member of the Virginia militia
   - a clergyman
   - an African enslaved in the colony

When is it time to TAKE ACTION?

Patrick Henry’s intense frustration compelled him to act. What circumstances in your life have triggered you to make a decision or to take action?
Vocabulary in Context

Vocabulary Practice

Decide whether these statements about the vocabulary words are true or false.

1. An invincible chess champion is one who has not been beaten.
2. A statue that is lying supinely is lying face down.
3. A vigilant guard usually takes naps while on duty.
4. Circumstances that extenuate a bad decision are those that make it worse.
5. A country that is overrun by armies from another land is experiencing subjugation.
6. A vase that has broken into several pieces may be described as inviolate.
7. A martial gathering is one that is organized by peace demonstrators.

Academic Vocabulary in Speaking

- document
- illustrate
- interpret
- promote
- reveal

Patrick Henry uses several persuasive techniques to illustrate his points. In a small group, discuss how he presents himself to the delegates and promotes his argument. Use at least three Academic Vocabulary words in your discussion.

Vocabulary Strategy: Analogies

One way to determine word meanings is through the use of analogies, or comparisons between pairs of words. Here are two examples of analogies that show different kinds of relationships.

- Vigilant : unobservant :: invincible : vulnerable (Vigilant is to unobservant as invincible is to vulnerable.)
- Subjugation : prisoner :: election : governor
  (Subjugation is to prisoner as election is to governor.)

In the first example, both pairs of words are near opposites. In the second example, the relationship is one of process. Just as a prisoner has experienced subjugation, a governor has experienced election.

Practice Complete each analogy by choosing the word that creates the same relationship between both pairs of words. Use a dictionary if you are uncertain about a word’s meaning.

1. animal : cat :: vehicle : (a) driving, (b) house, (c) bicycle, (d) theater
2. sad : depressed :: dry : (a) desiccated, (b) wet, (c) arid, (d) damp
3. roof : gable :: poem : (a) haiku, (b) prose, (c) rhyme, (d) stanza
4. vogue : anachronism :: obtuse : (a) dull, (b) cheerful, (c) acute, (d) angle

◆ GRAMMAR AND STYLE: Vary Sentence Types

Review the Grammar and Style note on page 232. Part of Henry’s style is to vary his sentences among the four basic types:

- Declarative, which expresses a statement of fact, desire, intent, or feeling and ends with a period. This is no time for ceremony. (line 6)
- Interrogative, which asks a question and ends with a question mark. Shall we try argument? (line 41)
- Imperative, which gives a command and sometimes ends with an exclamation point. Trust it not, sir. (lines 27–28)
- Exclamatory, which expresses strong emotions and always ends with an exclamation point. I repeat it, sir, we must fight! (line 60)

Henry’s skillful use of sentence variety creates an interesting melody. It also keeps the reader engaged by calling for frequent shifts in response.

PRACTICE For each sentence in this excerpt from Henry’s speech, identify the type and compose your own sentence following his pattern.

EXAMPLE

The war is actually begun!
We won the game!

(1) The next gale that sweeps from the north will bring to our ears the clash of resounding arms!
(2) Our brethren are already in the field!
(3) Why stand we here idle?
(4) What is it that gentlemen wish?
(5) What would they have?
(6) Is life so dear, or peace so sweet, as to be purchased at the price of chains and slavery?
(7) Forbid it, Almighty God!
